

A History and Reputation for Critical Manufacturing

The owners of Longleaf Collection have a long standing reputation for providing a high level of customer service with difficult products, in demanding markets. They consistently score in the excellent range of customer supplied performance survey with their automotive customer base. They have also built a reputation for problem-solving, and translating practical solutions into significant gains for their customers.

This philosophy has carried over into the custom hardware products that they manufacture, in house, under the name of Longleaf Collection. Incorporating lean manufacturing principals, orders are processed from start to finish in less than 4 weeks, and many times within a week when there is a critical need.
